

Cristiano Cabrita holds a Ph.D. in Political Science and International Relations from the Institute for Political Studies (Catholic University of Portugal) with a thesis on American Grand Strategy, neoconservatism and US Foreign Policy. He also holds a B.A. and a M.Sc. in International Relations from Lusíada University of Lisbon. In 2005 he earned an A.A. from the Institute for European Studies (Catholic University of Portugal). In 2008/2009, he was a visiting student at the University of Oxford (St. Antony's College) with a Calouste Gulbenkian Foundation scholarship. Along with it, he is also a research associate at The Research Center of the Institute for Political Studies (CIEP). He regularly comments on international affairs on television, radio and print media.

Since 2006 he works at the Mayor's office of his hometown, Albufeira, where is the Head of the Division of Communication, Public Relations and International Relations. Author of the book "Neoconservatism and American Foreign Policy", his primary research interests include American Foreign Policy; International Politics; Security Studies; Comparative Politics; Political Theory and International Relations Theory.